

Guidehouse Logo

Our logo is the most distilled visual representation of the Guidehouse brand mission to solve big problems, build trust in society, and empower our clients to shape the future. The following will demonstrate how its individual elements also highlight important aspects of our purpose and vision.

While our logo is a foundational element of our brand system, it does not represent the entirety of our visual brand. Nevertheless, it should be used often and applied to all communications.

The Acon

Our Acon consists of two symmetrical pillars, which are a visual reference to the Guidehouse brand purpose. These pillars symbolize our dual expertise across both the public and private sectors, joined together in a single unified vision.

The green pillar, representing prosperity, sustainability, and forward-looking growth, is anchored by its black counterpart, which stands for strength and stability rooted in the steadfastness of our brand vision.

Together, the two pillars converge to point the way upward, toward our North Star: Our mission to shape the future.

Our Acon resembles a compass needle that leads us forward while offering an all-encompassing 360 degree view of the landscape that surrounds us.

Anatomy of the Acon

The Guidehouse Acon is composed of four specific parts:

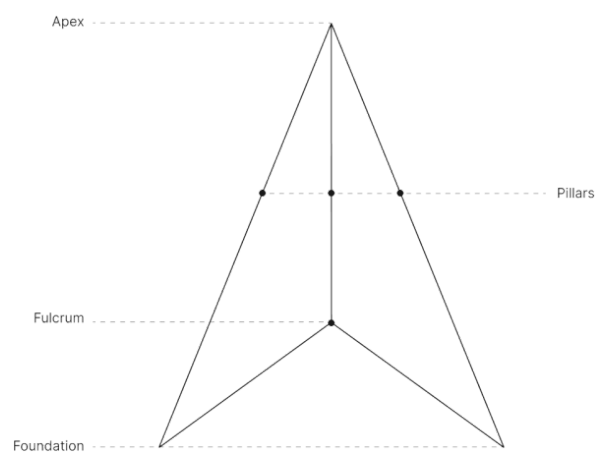

The Apex: The tip or point of the Acon

The Pillars: The three vertical, straight lines that create the midsection

The Fulcrum: The area at the base of the Acon where the Pillars meet the Foundation

The Foundation: The base of the Acon

Stroke: The Acon should be 2pt stroke in most cases, but when used in larger formats, the weight needs to be increased to ensure visibility.

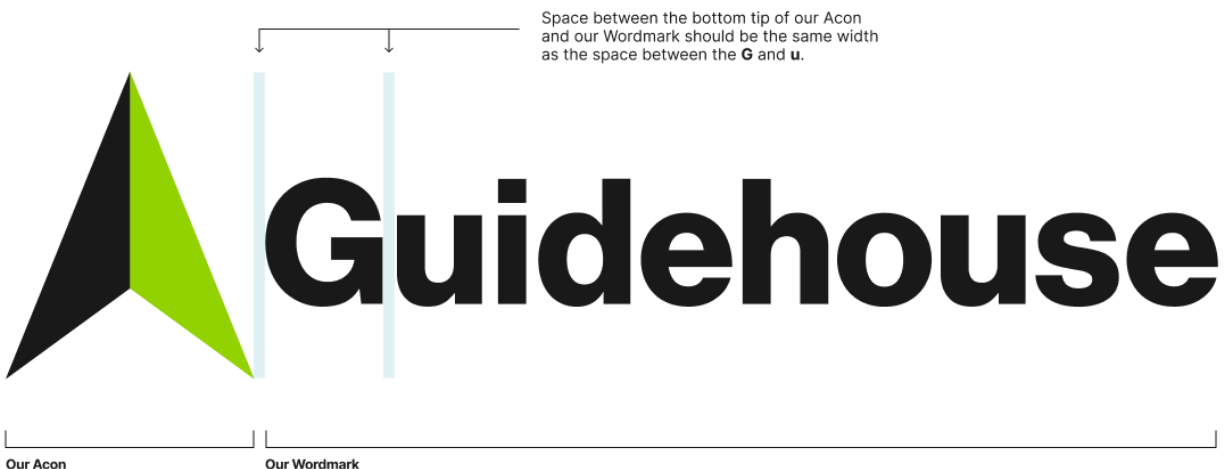

NOTE

For information on how the Acon can be applied to photography see the Acon section of our Illustration System

Logo Spacing

Because our logo is the most visible expression of our brand, it's essential that it be clear, scalable, and responsive.

Crowding our logo can make it appear unbalanced, illegible, or even unprofessional. Providing clear, uncluttered space in and around the logo ensures our audiences can identify it quickly and easily, reinforcing our brand.

Safe Spacing

Use the capital “G” in Guidehouse to measure the minimum amount of safe space needed around the logo in print and communications applications. This area should be free of all other graphic elements.

NOTE

This rule does not apply to apparel, architectural applications, and way-finding.

Safe Spacing Do's & Don'ts

Protecting our logo's safe space is important for many reasons, chief among them being to ensure it always stands out from other messaging or logos that may be vying for attention.

This page demonstrates two ways we can ensure safe space is enforced and why it's essential to adhere to these standards.

✗ Don't

These logos are too close to each other. Placing any other logo close to the Guidehouse Logo runs the risk of making ours look secondary.

✓ Do

Here both logos co-exist comfortably. In general, we recommend keeping competing logos at a distance from the Guidehouse Logo to avoid diminishing ours or confusing viewers.

✗ Don't

When copy is placed too close to our logo, it can appear to be part of our logo, which we want to avoid.

✓ Do

Here the copy is at the minimum distance from the Guidehouse Logo and appears intentional, not like an addition to our logo.

Alternate Logo Colors

The Guidehouse Logo works best on white or very light backgrounds. In all other cases, a Guidehouse Alternate Logo should be used.

Guidehouse Alt Logo 1 works best on top of our mid-tone and darkest colors, as well as on top of photography.

Guidehouse Alt Logo 2 should only be used in instances where the logo is placed on top of our Green+ and Guidehouse Green brand colors.

NOTE

Permission is required before using a gray scale or one-color logo. Contact brandbox@guidehouse.com for guidance.

Logo Backgrounds

When using Alt Logo 1 over photography, it is most effective when placed over simple images and subtle backgrounds.

In many cases, adding a 10-20% screen of black between the image and logo will help improve clarity and legibility.

Registration Mark Use

When deciding whether to use a brand logo with the registration mark (®) or without, it is important to consider the context and the type of material on which the logo will be used. It is advised to use at the first or most prominent mention, but not every subsequent application. Here are some general guidelines:

1. Marketing Materials: The use of the registration mark on marketing materials can vary. We do prefer to use it the mark on printed materials. We prefer not to use it on websites, social media and other digital content. The rationale is that these materials are often more controlled and less likely to be misused.
2. Editorial Use: If the logo is being used in an editorial context, such as news articles or reviews, the ® symbol is not required.
3. External Documents: In external company documents including press releases and company reports, it is advisable to use the mark at least once per page when the mark appears.
4. Internal Documents: For internal company documents and communications, the ® symbol is not necessary to indicate trademark status.
5. Apparel: It is generally recommended not to use the registration mark on apparel items, especially if the logo is embroidered. The registration mark can become a dot or may not turn out well depending on the size of the embroidery.
6. Hard Goods: The registration mark is typically used on hard goods. This includes items like pens, mugs, and other promotional products that are distributed widely and may end up in various places.

Logo Placement

Our logo should be located in one of these five placement options:

1. Top Left
2. Top Right
3. Center
4. Bottom Left
5. Bottom Right
6. Top Center

Logo Alignment

If typography is combined with the Guidehouse Logo in any communication, then both our logo and the typography should be similarly aligned.

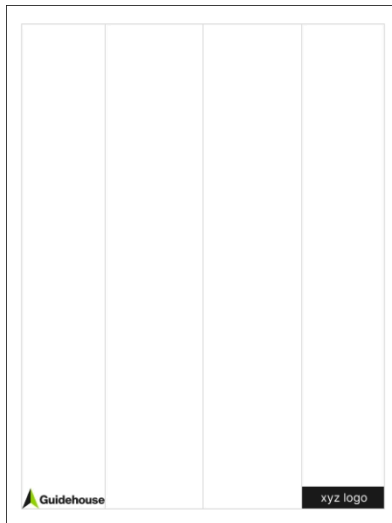

In the example shown, both elements should be left aligned.

Co-Branding

This shows one example of how the Guidehouse Logo may be applied to co-branded materials that visually depict both brands in a Guidehouse-led relationship.

- Never use a partner logo without a signed teaming or alliance partnership agreement in place.
Both the Guidehouse Logo and our co-branding partner's logo must appear on all relevant communications and materials.
- Each logo should appear as equal size in proportion to one another.
- When using a third-party logo with the Guidehouse Logo, all the usual free space rules normally applied to the Guidehouse Logo on its own continue to apply (e.g., the "G" space rule).
- Although the example provided depicts co-equal branding between Guidehouse and our partner company, the relative prominence of either party may vary depending on the specific co-branding agreement between the two parties.

Minimum Size

When reduced below certain sizes, our Guidehouse Logo can become challenging to read. That's why it's important to always check the size of our logo when designing in small formats like digital ads or social media.
